The Bass Highway between Shannon and Newbridge in Carlow town was closed for two years after cracks were discovered in a bridge. It was reopened last month following a four-year construction project but the road remains closed until January 2018. The work has meant the closure of the popular tourist route. Speaking at a meeting in Carrick on Suir this week, community leader Linda Floyd described the closure of the road as "total devastation". Speaking to the Carlow Leader on Tuesday, Ms Floyd said people were already "breaking even" on trade due to the road's closure. She said the road closure also meant that local businesses were losing out. More from the Carlow Leader "It's hard, they don't get out to people as much as they did before, not a full one third. It's devastating. We couldn't get them out on a Friday, they were gone. "Everyone is losing on the weekends, people are coming out for Fridays and not going back in, why would they when it's an hour's drive to the nearest town, they'll just go into the city. "There are restaurants losing, hotels losing. It's a lot of money. We are not making anything out of the road at the moment." Long time local Ms Floyd said locals had been told that the next peak tourist season would not be until summer 2018. "It's devastating. In the low season it's bad enough, but in the high season it's the worst thing that could happen. I think you'd have to hit us really hard with a good motorway to be as devastating as this." The Carlow Leader also spoke to Peter Evans, who is well-known in the county. Mr Evans works at The Hostel in Oldcastle and is a long

One option is an information handling system. An information handling system generally processes, compiles, stores, and/or communicates information or data for business, personal, or other purposes. Because technology and information handling needs and requirements may vary between different applications, information handling systems may also vary regarding what information is handled, how the information is handled, how much information is processed, stored, or communicated, and how quickly and efficiently the information may be processed, stored, or communicated. The variations in information handling systems allow for information handling systems to be general or configured for a specific user or specific use such as financial transaction processing, reservations, enterprise data storage, or global communications. In addition, information handling systems may include a variety of hardware and software resources that may be configured to process, store, and communicate information and may include one or more computer systems, data storage systems, and networking systems.
