Plot Story begins with Bhagat Singh Gandhi announcing to the press that he is ending his life in the presence of his family and the media. Mr. Gandhi states that he has been through a lot of pain in the last few days. He says that he has had to see and hear all kinds of indecent words related to women. When he asked for some respite from his torture, they asked him if he wants to meet God. Bhagat Singh calls God the man he should have been and says that God should be with those who are always ready to sacrifice their lives for others. Gandhi asks his wife to look after his younger son and leaves for his office in Colaba with two trusted friends, Shiv and Sahil. Gandhi takes the speech of one of them and then hangs himself with the help of the tiffin box and goes for cremation. Sahil continues to talk about his ideals and ideals of Gandhi. He explains to his friends how Gandhi went to war with the British. Sahil says that they attacked Gandhi when he was least expecting them. However, Gandhi did not give up and fought for their rights. He asks his friends to try and understand his pain. Shiv narrates a story of how Gandhi came to India in 1906 from South Africa. He was ready to sacrifice his life for the independence of India. However, he wanted freedom without violence. Gandhi wanted a revolution that would bring about a change in India and Bhagat Singh wanted a revolution without violence. Gandhi tries to reason with Shiv and he states that India has to be free from the British. Shiv says that India is not free. He states that the Indians are slaves to the British government. He asks Shiv if Gandhi wants India to be free and suggests that he should sacrifice his life for India. Shiv laughs at him and says that Gandhi should be present at the moment of India's freedom. However, he says that Gandhi must stop the country from falling into the hands of the British and suggests that he should use violence to help. Shiv explains to him that he will help Gandhi only when he asks them to help. Shiv suggests that Gandhi has taken a vow of 82157476af
